NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Simmons who gives instruction in vocal and instrumental music, has removed to No. 31 Beretania-street.

At Fort Street Church, Sunday morning, Rev. J. A. Cruzan, will preach upon "God with us the Secret of Victory." In the evening Rev. W. J. Smith, of San Francisco, will deliver his last lecture to young men.

How popular King Kalakaua has become abroad, is shown in the numerous comical advertisements in the newspapers of New York, San Francisco, and other cities, which present roval associations.

Rev. J. Smith preaches his farewell sermon of Fort Street Church, to-morrow evening. The reverend gentlemen and his wife de- to be present at the interesting occasion. A kanaka company of twenty-five hands eighty ounces of gold dust in six days.—New Age. [There are five to six hundred native Hawaiians in California and Oregon, who ought to be induced to return to their country.]

Our Chinese fellow-citizens have determined to erect an arch on their own account, as their contribution to the decorations of the city in honor of the return of the King. For this purpose they are said to have collected, in a few hours, between $1300 and $1400-a larger sum general public. China is marching on.

We are glad to announce that Rev. J. A. Cruzan has accepted a call from the Fort Street Church to become its pastor. He is a gentleman of fine culture, and is an earnest Christian. The whole community is benefitted by the settlement of such a man. Mr. Cruzan returns to the Coast by the next steamer; to settle some home matters; and we may expect to see him again about next New Year; Mrs. Cruzan remains in Honolulu. The following programme of music will be played by the Band, in Emma Square, this afternoon, commencing at half-past 4 o'clock:-March-Sharpshooters Leutner Galop-Pomone .. Fantasia-Farewell to the Mountains. Waltz-Remembrance of Thee.

Selection-Jerusalem The Band will give an extra concert at the Hawaiian Hotel on Monday evening, October 24th (steamer permitting).

Hon. A. S. Cleghorn and lady, the Princess Likelike, gave a party at their Waikiki residence, on the 17th instant, to celebrate the seventh birthday of their daughter. A Hawaiian hala or dance was gotten up to entertain some foreign friends-the owner of the steam yacht Wanderer and his lady, and officers. A large party of the society of the city enjoyed the ceasion, among whom were H. H. R. Keelikolani, Hon. Mrs. Bishop, and many others.

The schooner Manuokawai while coming from Kauai to this port, on the 16th inst., had two of her men knocked overboard, supposably by the boom, and one of the two, a native named Naiwi, was drowned, the other was rescued. The schooner picked up the body of the drowned man and returned again to Kauai.

Some alterations have been made in the striking apparatus of the new fire bell that was found to be defective in sound, and it will be rung at half-past four this afternoon. If on trial, no improvement in sound is found, it will be sent back to the coast and a new one that came on the Lady Lampson, and which was on exhibition at the Mechanic's Fair, in San Francisco, will be set up in the Bell Tower.

At Lahaina, on the 13th instant, during quarrel about some kalo, Puha stabbed Kailianu in the shoulder with his knife. The wound proved a very painful one, but fortunately not dangerous, and Puha is recovering. His assailant was promptly arrested and tried, and has are not so robust as they should be at the age been sentenced to a fine of $50, and six months' imprisonment at hard labor. He arrived here in the schooner Nettie Merrill on Tuesday last. and was confided to the custody of Mr. Fyfe.

The civil cause, Hyman and Ordenstein, as assignees of C. K. Kapai, a bankrupt, vs. C. E. Richardson, came before the Supreme Court on Monday last. After the plaintiffs' case had been heard, Mr. Preston, for the defendant, moved for a non-suit, on the ground that the creditors who signed the petition on which Kapai was made bankrupt did not represent | those who broke out in the premises. A carpenter named Yunna caused a sensation on Thursday evening, in Messrs, Hollister & Co.'s store. He has for some time past been unsettled in his mind, but his derangement usually takes the harmless form of a religious craze. On the occasion referred to he was very violent, and insisted that the young man he addressed should go with him to hear Mr. Smith's lecture, and finally flung a heavy sodawater glass across the counter, smashing it to a thousand pieces, but fortunately hurting no one. He was placed under restraint for the night, but released next morning-an arrangement of doubtful pelicy, unless he be under constant super-

By the Ceylon the new organ for St. Andrew's Cathedral has arrived, and it is hoped that its voice will be heard in the Christmas services there this year. A concert in aid of the Organ Fund is aunounced to take place in the Music Hall on Thursday, Nov. 3rd. A novel and interesting feature of this entertainment will be the performance of Romberg's Kinder (children's) Symphony. This curious and pretty piece is chiefly performed upon toy instruments, such as trumpets; toys imitating the quail, cuckoo, and nightingale; the triangle, bells, drum, and cymbals. One of the other instrumental selections will be a quartette on stringed instruments.

Nawelu and Kalua, who forged the signature of Mrs. Benfield in order to procure liquor were brought up for trial on Tuesday. Nawelu was convicted and sentenced to two months penal servitude and a fine of $1. The only evidence against Kalua being that of Nawelu, the prosecuting counsel deemed it advisable to enter a nolle prosequi in his case, and he was discharged. It is to be hoped that the disclosures made during the last few weeks, will render vendors of liquor cautious as to the character of the orders under which they serve natives, and that the prosecutions which have taken place will deter our ingenious native tipplers from resorting to forgery as a means of procuring the drink they crave.

The marriage of Rev. R. Wainwright, and Miss Willis on Tuesday last, at St. Andrew's pro-Cathedral, has awakened a lively social interest, on account of the high esteem in which the caricatures of His Majesty's name, travels, and | bride, the sister of Bishop Willis is held in this community. At the appointed hour, 11.30 a.m., the church was filled to its utmost capacity by friends of bride and groom and others anxious Ex. Gen. James M. Comly, U. S. The Small-pox Hospital Statistics.

We have been favored by Dr. C. T. Rodgers with copies of the tables which we publish below, in which the statistics of small-pox cases treated at the hospital on the reef, and of the mortality among the patients, are grouped together in an interesting manner. These tables form part of a report on the late epidemic, which, at the request of Consul McKinley, Dr. Rodgers, has prepared for transmission to the National Board of Health of the United States They give a classification of the patients by nationality, sex, and age, and show the per centage of deaths which occurred in each class.

terest. The per centage of deaths among

Chinese patients was only half as great as among Hawaiians, although many very bad cases which Chinese coolies were imported here.

Whether this is the result of racial peculiarities

or of the difficulty experienced in persuading

the natives of this country to submit to proper treatment, it is impossible to say, but probably, both causes have combined, The number cases among white foreigners was too small to make the percentage of deaths of much value One of the four who died committed suicide during delirium; another was an infant two weeks old; whilst a third died from disease developed during convalescence. Looking at the general death rate, when all the patients are taken together, it is noticeable that the percentage of recoveries among patients between ten and twenty years of age was very much greater than among either men or women between twenty or forty. This ought not to have been the case judging from the statistics of other countries and points to the inference that if the natives when they ought to be at the prime of life, it is not altogether any racial characteristic which is the cause of it. It will be noticed that the mortality among women was greatest, between the ages of twenty and forty, and was only about the general average in those who were older. On the other hand the chief mortality among the men was shown, where it might have been expected, amongst those above forty years of age. Another striking fact which we learn from Dr. Rodgers, though it is not brought out in these tables, is the marked difference in the death rate between the cases brought from shore and Rodgers took charge of the hospital, five weeks after the disease became epidemic, he found that no record had been kept by which it was possible to distinguish the one class of cases from the other. He therefore directed that all cases breaking out on the hospital grounds from that time, should be so designated. They were found to number fifty-four, of whom 13 or 24.07 per cent. died, while among the other 521 patients who make up the total number treated in the hospital, the deaths were 188, or 36.08 per cent. The patients who broke out at the hospital were moreover, all natives. If from those brought to the hospital with the disease, we deduct the whites and Chinaman and confine the comparison to the 454 patients of the same race, the contrast becomes still more striking; the mortality among those brought from outside being 38.77 per cent. against 24:07 per cent. of those breaking out on the premises, an excess of more than 50 per cent. This striking difference must be attributed mainly to two causes:-First, the fatigue and exposure incident to removal, some times for a distance of several miles; sometimes in bad weather and at critical stages of the disease: Second, the advantage of having the cases under intelligent supervision and control from the outset and thus preventing during the earlier stages of the disease, the adoption by ignorant people, of measures calculated to imperil the lives of the patients. Those who were fortunate enough to be in the hospital from the commencement of the attack, were also protected in the main from the devices of the native 'kahunas,'' to whose operations a considerable number of deaths during the late epidemic, must certainly be attributed.

It is understood that the Board of Health have caused to be prepared statistics of the whole number of cases which occurred during the epidemic, about a third of which were not treated at the hospital, many indeed not being discovered until the death of the unfortunate patients rendered further concealment impossible We trust that it will not be long before these statistics are placed at the disposal of the press for publication and comment.

Mr. Justice Jupp informed the Bar that, in onsequence of the death of President Garfield, e should hold the Court ready to adjourn upon ecciving intimation that commemoration exer ises would be held, and would then be ready to lear any remarks the members of the Bar might desire to make.

Before Mr. Justice Jupp. The King vs Keala; forgery. The prisoner leaded guilty to the forgery of an order for $25, and was sentenced to imprisonment with hard labor for six months, and a fine of $25. The King vs Keone Pulsole (k); forgery This was the case in which an endorsement to a came to the hospital from the crowded vessels in draft in favor of J. G. Kipp by C. N. Spencer for $460 was forged, and an attempt made to collect the money from W. G. Irwin & Co. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and was defended by Mr. J. L. Kaulukou. After twenty minutes' consultation, the jury brought in a verdict of guilty of uttering only, and the Court sentenced the defendant to one year's imprisonment with hard labor, and a fine of $200. of members of the Bar being present, Mr. A. S.

Hartwell referred to the statement made by His Honor on Monday, that the Court would be prepared to adjourn in the event of a day being devoted to exercises in memory of the late President Garfield. In moving the Court to adjourn, he expressed his conviction that all that had been said and done in regard to the assassination of President Garfield, was very far from being only personal sympathy. It was he thought due to the fact that the Head and Representative of all law and order in the United States had been attacked. The deep Anglo-Saxon love for law had been touched to the core. General Garfield was a truly representative American, uniting the leading traits which Americans love. He especially delighted his countrymen because he had retained, to the end, his love of the simple life which is common to the mass of the people Mr. W. C. Jones followed with some remarks eulogistic of General Garfield. From his early days to the closing scenes of his life he always gave evidence of high and honorable character and of the highest attributes which constitute a true man. The assassin's blow in his case was a blow stricken at the tree of liberty itself. His Honor, Mr. Justice Judd, expressed the horror caused in every mind by the deed which had caused a great nation to mourn the loss of its head. It was far beyond the wisdom of man to fathom the design of such an event, but they might read some of its lessons in the world-wide tenderness which had been awakened. The Ministry of Suffering-how eloquently it spoke to the human heart? His Honor noticed the been similarly called together was caused by an event which occurred on the very day of the assault on General Garfield. The action was for $2000 damages on account of the seizure by the assignee in bankruptcy of Thomas Spencer of goods in a store at Hilo which were claimed as the property of Thomas Spencer, jun., a natural son and ward of the bankrupt's. The Marshal admitted having seized the goods, and the issue which went to the jury was which of the Spencers they belonged to. Several technical points were argued, the discussion of which occupied the greater part of the afternoon.

THURSDAY, October 13th, after the evidence for the defence was concluded.

Mr. Hartwell moved the Court to instruct the jury to return a verdict for the plaintiff on the round that the defendant had not produced any vidence to show that the goods were his. The Court having declined to so instruct the jury. evidence in rebuttal was put in. By arrangement, certain evidence had been taken by commission at Hilo. Of this the evidence of Judge Lyman and Mr. Severance had been put in by the defendant's counsel as follows:-Judge Lyman's evid-nee showed that on 29th January, 1879, Thomas Spencer was duly appointed guardian of the boy. The petition in persuance of which this order was made, set forth that the boy was (June, 1878) eight years old and was possessed of both real and personal property. An inventory of the real estate was given which showed it to have cost $1960. The evidence of this witness, and that of the Collector of Customs at Hilo were to the effect that for some time after the store was opened it was carried on in the name of Thomas Spencer, and then the name was changed to Thomas Spencer, jun. For the plaintiff, the evidence of Obadiah B. Spencer was that Thomas Spencer, jun. is the son of a native woman named Makaleka, and that the latter had an income from her makuas, and had been in receipt of money from sales of land at Hamakua. She also inherited a lot of cattle and several horses, some hogs, and bullocks. When her boy was a year old, they had a luan at which two or three bullocks and about fifteen hogs were killed. The whole district was there and the guests all made contributions in money as a present to the boy, altogether between $200 and $250. This money, with the proceeds of the lands and bullocks, was taken charge of by his brother Thomas for the boy. One of the lands sold for $250 and Makaleka's share of it was two-thirds. His brother had a tin box in which he deposited the boy's money. He himself gave the woman a horse for the boy, and F. Spencer gave her either one or two. The mother used to let out horses to tourists, and he remembered her getting $120 at one time from the horses. He mentioned several other sources from which she had made a good deal of me More than three years ago Makaleka bought a house at Hilo for the boy. The money, $350, came out of the boy's tin box. She had also had two or three whaleboats for many years which had been bought with the boy's money and had been a source of revenue to her. The store at Hilo he understood to be the boy's, his brother had shown him the first invoice, and the store accounts showing "what the little boy had made." Mr. Thomas Spencer was called as a witness to corroborate his brother's evidence. In answer to a juror, he said that before he commenced importing goods from San Francisco for the store, he should judge that he received about $3000 on the boy's account and that the further money required to pay for all the goods imported had been made by the store, FRIDAY, 14th.

(Communicated.) The Temperance Cause;

been zealously and faithfully discussed in the two great, enlightened, and progressive nations of the earth; Great Eritain and the United States, with rather doubtful results. Statistics show a continued increase of alcoholic liquors, and of drunkenness in the lands, where zealous Father Matthews and Goughs abound; and where no such men are to be found or heard; in France, Spain, Italy, Greece, and other countries, they really do not seem to be needed. A man with a hope of success; and a woman with love will never be drunkards. Where the lecturers abound-as in London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, New York, Boston, Chicago; there the tipplers still more abound. Gin and whisky flourish in spite of most faithful and zealous denunciation. And this is mentioned with regret by a writer, who would rejoice to see total abstinence from alcoholic drinks as a beverage prevail throughout this Archipelago. But the curse of England and America hangs on to Hawaii. I have been wondering at the causes that curse the most intelligent and public spirited countries the most, with the evil of intemperance; and I have been thinking, that in those countries where material progress and enterprise are so much worshipped; and where nobles and hereditary; factory fords, or railway and bonanza kings ab-Kealaula (k) vs Kapa (w.) This case was sorb so much of the land and wealth of a nation, dence was that he went to Kihikihi's house in dismissed at the July term for non-appearance there are such multitudes of landless and hopeless people who crave stimulants. The se patrons of gin palaces are all landless and hopeless. Excess is begotten of hopelessness, loneliness, cares and struggles. Extreme total abatinence discussion among people is still associated with extreme drunkenness. The hosts of the wretched guzzlers are the strength of the liquor production; and many of the well to do fall into drinking habits in disturbed or despondent moods, only as they find abundant tempta-tion at their hand. Now if there were two rer was put in and argued and the Court took | million land owners in England, as in France; instead of only about 30,000 in England; there would be no more need of temperance societies in England than in France; and if our legislative measures and governmental action in the past had so shaped the order of things in this country, that every native was settled fixedly on a Kulcana homestead, as in the Tonga Islands, we would not have to deplore so much intemperance among our natives. There are, it is sad to say, many drunkards in homes, and on lands of their own. But the great majority of sots are the landless and the hopeless. It is no use preaching temperance to poor hopeless factory hands in England; and it may be equally vain to expect the hands of our plantations to be temperate, who have no future before them.
